ABSTRACT

Software titles are listed under the name and address of the company or institution from which they are commercially available, but no price information is provided. Types of microcomputers are indicated for which each software package is available. Titles cover library skills instruction for students or other users as well as library technical processes for librarians or media specialists. Brief information regarding an elementary computer literacy curriculum and a library media consulting firm is also included. (EM)

COMPUTER SOFTWARE FOR LIBRARY/MEDIA CENTER APPLICATIONS

By Jim Deacon

I have compiled a listing of companies and institutions offering commercial software that is directly aimed at library/media center applications. This listing is not meant as an endorsement for any of the products mentioned nor do I claim to have found all the software that is available.

Contact the companies for more information about their products and as with any software item, check it out before you purchase.

COMPUTER SOFTWARE FOR LIBRARY/MEDIA CENTER APPLICATIONS
AN UPDATE
By Jim Deacon

Since the listing in the Fall issue of CMC NEWS I have been sent information on other library software programs. I would like to thank Marilyn R. Veldof, a library consultant with State Department of Education in New Jersey, who sent her compilation of library programs. A larger part of this update comes from her list.

Contact the companies or institutions mentioned below for more information about their products and as with any software item, check it out before you purchase.

Note: The Fall issue had the name for the company EDUCOMP misspelled. This is the listing as it should appear:
